Great Britain has a very direct interest in Chinese foreign trade and its progress. The British share in the trade is larger than ever, and it has been growing at Peking to unite the capital and Tientein at a quicker pace than the Chinese total. In 188 the trade of this country with China, inclusive Hongkong, was £23,000,000, which was a marked | was at last about to be really opened up for advance upon preceding years. Last year it was £37,500,000. The importance of the rate of the advance is more to Great Britain than the actual gross quantity, as we showed that it is for China. A trade computed at £37,500,000, valuable as it is, cannot be said to be vital for British commerce. But the trade, of which it is a proportion, is an increasing trade. Scarcely any bounds can be set to its future; and We hope the Times is right in its prognostica appearances indicate that Englishmen retain the opportunity of keeping at its head, with consequences tions, as indeed we believe it to be in the to national industries of the most extraordinary de-

A correspondent writes to the Times as follows .- The writer of the recent article in The Times upon the report of the Commissioners of Customs [in Chine] accounts for the falling off in the revenue from tea by stating that the taste for tes and the consumption of tea is as great as ever, but the decrease of duty is due to the inferior quality of last year's growth and the increasing use of Indian and Caylon teas, which go further than China when used alone but there is another aspect of the question which affects the sale of tea very largely, and that is the outting in the trade, which is surely but gradually wearing-the rising generation She will, however, go into dock to day, when from the use of tea.
